

SOCIETY and PERSONAL ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Society

The class of 1922 and the class of 1923 of the South Bend High school entertained with a banquet last evening at the high school followed by the annual Alumni dance which was given in the gymnasium. Forty-two members of the class of 1922 were seated at a long table over which hung a canopy of red and white streamers, the class colors. Sprays of evergreen, tiny Christmas trees, red candles in crystal holders formed the other decorations for the table. On the other side of the luncheon room, the class of 1923 was seated at a table formed in a square. The class colors of purple and gold in many novel crepe effects and purple and gold balloons formed the attractive decorations of the table at which covers were placed for 55 members. Dancing began at 9 o'clock in the gymnasium, 250 guests enjoying the program of dances as played by the Miller-Anderson orchestra. The officers of the Alumni association and Miss Margaret Freshley, Miss Bernice Clark, Forbes Julian, and Louis Henschel were in charge of the arrangements.

The chaparrones were Mrs. J. S. McCowan, Miss Thelma Sack, Mrs. Homer J. Miller, Mrs. Sue Clark Perkins, Miss Hazel Rennoe and Mrs. Fred Eastman. Committee for the reunion of the class 1922 included Edmund Henschel, Miss Agnes Roloff, Thomas Stanfield and Miss Mary Warner. The guest of honor was Miss Elizabeth Matheny and toasts were given by Daniel C. Rich, Miss Ruth Henschel and Miller Kreighbaum. Committee for the reunion of the class of 1923 included Henry L. Himm, Miss Bernice Moore, Forbes Julian, Miss Genevieve Hardy, Miss Margaret Freshley and Miss Lydia Rose. The class guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McCowan and daughter, Margaret, Miss Blanche Thum and Miss Bernice Clark. A program of piano numbers by Arnold Alexander and Clarence Harding, selections by the Studebaker Sextet and short talks by the president, Henry Himm and Mr. McCowan preceded the dance.

Miss Dorothy Malmberg, Miss Miriam Wuthrich and Robert Nicely entertained with a dancing party Friday evening at the home of Mrs. J. M. S. mid. Receiving with the host and hostesses was Hart Tanton of San Francisco, Cal., the honor guest of the evening. The ball-room was elaborately decorated with red and white streamers, quilt coverings for the lights being fastened in crepe of the same colors. Dancing began at 9 o'clock, Harry Penny's orchestra playing the program for the evening. Late in the evening a buffet luncheon was served.

The Sunnyside Neighborhood Circle held an afternoon meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. A. Goetzinger, Ironwood rd. The time was spent socially and at the close of the afternoon luncheon was served. In two weeks the circle will hold an all day meeting at the home of Mrs. Lewis Grabowski, four miles north of the city.

Mrs. George W. Sherman, 1304 Leeper av., was hostess Friday at a 1 o'clock luncheon in the Florentine room of the Hotel LaSalle, her guests being the members of her bridge club. The table at which eight guests were seated was centered with a miniature Christmas tree. The guests were Mrs. E. J. McElrain, Mrs. George Mittenberger, Mrs. F. W. Reed, Mrs. William Bender, Jr., Mrs. W. D. Keegan, Mrs. Walter Dennis, and Miss Margaret Sherman. The afternoon was spent at the bridge tables at the home of Mrs. Sherman and the favors of the game were won by Mrs. McElrain and Mrs. Keegan. In two weeks, Mrs. William Bender, Jr., W. LaSalle av., will entertain the club.

Mrs. George Wheelock, Park av., has as her house guest for the week end, her nephew, Eldon Casaday of Madison, Wis. Friday noon, he was the honor guest at a luncheon given by Richard Robertson and in the evening Harry Ellsworth Wheelock, Jr., 233 Riverside dr., entertained 20 guests informally in his honor.

Adert McGann, N. Michigan st., was host at a 7 o'clock dinner given last evening in the Florentine room of the Hotel LaSalle. Dinner was served to 22 guests at an attractive table centered with flowers.

The annual luncheon of the Milwaukee-Dowder club was held Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock on the Mezzanine balcony of the Hotel LaSalle. Places were laid for Mrs. Carl Gintz, Mrs. E. McEnderfer, Mrs. William Dudley Bungert of Los Angeles, Calif., Miss Ruth Staples, Miss Helen Gaffill, Miss Margaret Palmer, Miss Helen Muesel, Miss Mildred Rennoe, Miss Hazel Rennoe, Miss Lois Martin, Miss Margaret Schaefer, Miss Jeannette Wagner, Miss Mildred Whitmer, Miss Frances Hager and Miss Elma Dixon of Ft. Wayne, Ind. The election of officers followed the luncheon resulting in the appointment of Miss Frances Hager, president; Miss Helen Gaffill, vice-president; Mrs. E. MacEnderfer, secretary-treasurer.

Miss Maria Studebaker, 561 W. LaSalle av., will receive on Monday afternoon from 3 to 5. This custom of receiving callers on New Years has been observed at the Studebaker home for many years and Miss Studebaker, who is the last surviving member of the family, will be happy to greet her many friends on that day. She will be assisted by her nieces, Miss Adelle Studebaker and Miss Louise Studebaker and Miss Bess Staples.

The Thursday Evening Card club was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Fischer, 217 Hamilton st., Thursday evening. The guests were won by Mrs. E. Fischer, Mrs. Louis Kerenka, Mrs. A. Berlow, M. Slutsky and L. Gross. Luncheon was served to 12 guests following the game. The next meeting will be held in two weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kennedy, 1218 N. Miner st.

The first annual banquet of the Kappa Sigma club of South Bend was held Thursday evening in the Gold room of the Oliver hotel. Places were laid for 16 guests including Jerry Roscoe, Elliott Olney, John Bowman, George M. Wahl, Dr. C. E. Savory, E. A. Schaub, Kenneth Gortel, Granville Keller, Walter Mueller, George Miller, J. C. Schaub, Jerry Urier, Clifford Lantz, Leroy Clauer, Frank E. Whitehall and A. E. Jones. The decoration of the table was carried out in the club colors, napkins being the flower chosen in scarlet, white and green. Dr. C. E. Savory served as toast-master. The club meets for luncheon the first Friday of each month in the Wedgewood room of the Oliver hotel.

A banquet was given Wednesday evening by the members of the Aupen Relief Corps at the old court house. Places were laid for 133 guests at long tables which were attractively decorated with polonetta. The hall was a bower of evergreen and other holiday decorations. A huge Christmas tree bearing a gift for each guest was a feature of the evening.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Marian Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Roberts, of Allerton, Mich., and Elmer A. Nimtz, of South Bend, which took place Wednesday at high noon at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. E. M. Kerlin, of South Bend, officiated. The wedding march was played by Miss Grace Miller, also of South Bend. The attendants were Miss Florence Roberts, sister of the bride, and Edward Rotzell, cousin of the groom. Miss Eleanor MacVean and Miss Esther Rosheck were ribbon girls and Miss Ruth Rosheck served as the flower girl. A wedding dinner was served following the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Nimtz will be at home after February 1 at 625 E. Broadway, South Bend.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl in my teens. I am considered very attractive and popular. I am in love—at least I think it is love—with a young man four years my senior. I have known this young man for over a year. When he came up to see me last time he told me he had met a girl, and that he went to see her every night. His claims that it is all there is to do in the town where he is now living.

How can I, without being rude or forward, make this certain young man like me more than anyone else? I am not of a jealous nature in the least, but I sincerely wish you could help me to attract his attention. Do you think he still loves me?

I do not care to go out with other young men, although I get many invitations. If I do go out, I keep constantly wishing my friend were near me. I think about him all the time, and know deep in my heart that I care for him more than any one else.

TEDDY: You have no right to object to your friend going to see another girl, because you are not engaged to him. It would be well for you to accept invitations from other young men, too.

Try to make yourself so attractive and the young man's visits so pleasant that he will prefer you to the other girl. This is all you can do.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl in my teens, and I'm going with a young man who said he thought a great deal of me until the other night, when I went out with another young man, which made him angry. He then said he didn't care much for me any more.

Now, I love this man, and I can do nothing but think about him. After he said this he made a date with me, but I didn't go. I didn't know whether to go with him or not.

Now, there is another young man who says he cares for me, but I don't like him as well as the first. Please advise me what to do. Shall I write him and tell him I don't care to go with any one who said what he said, or shall I ask him if he meant it? After he said he didn't care for me he explained that he didn't mean it. I'll be glad to follow your advice.

BROWN EYES: Invite the young man to call on you. Say that you like very much to have him for a friend, but that you cannot devote all of your time and attention to him. You should go about with all the young people and enjoy their society.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: Is it proper for a girl of 16 to invite a young man to call on her at her home?

DOLLY: If your parents agree, it is perfectly proper for you to have young men callers.

You should be home by 10 o'clock.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am deeply in love with a young man three years my senior. I am in my teens. I love this young man with all my heart, and don't think life will be worth living without him. I have often asked him to call, but he always has another date. Do you think he loves me? He gets invitations to dances and goes and meets other girls, and tells them he loves them.

Now, he is having one of his cold spells, and will hardly speak. Other girls say he talks about me. But I know he makes love to them all. I love him too deeply to forget him. Can I make him love me?

HEART-BROKEN BILLY: If this young man does not love you, my dear, and has not asked you to marry him, you have no right to demand that he give up his other friends. You might very well follow his example and become more interested in your other friends, too.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl 19 years old. While away at school two years ago I met a young man whom I learned to love very much. He had to leave before school was out, and asked me to be his wife. We set a date for the wedding. He was to come after that. That was one year and a half ago.

He didn't have the money to come on. He won't get a position and save his money and show me that he really cares for me. He doesn't want to work. I have begged him to start at the bottom and work up to some good position, but he won't do that.

I love him dearly, and would do anything in the world for him. I have waited now almost two years for him to prove his love for me. Shall I try to forget him? I don't go with any young men at all. They don't interest me.

BROKEN HEART. You are wasting your time on this young man, my dear. If he really loved you he would certainly try to work himself into a position where he could marry you.

Yes, try to forget him. Go about with your other friends. You will find diversion in their society.

Revelations of A Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

WHAT HARRY UNDERWOOD SWIFTLY EXPLAINED, THEN DEMANDED.

I had not eluded Harry Underwood, after all! This was my first chagrined thought as his flippant and stereotyped salutation, "Lady Fair," assailed my ears.

As I slowly turned and faced him, the words seemed so incongruous with his appearance as a venerable, white-bearded foreigner, that for a bewildered second, even as when I had first seen him in this role, I could not believe that it was indeed Lillian's recreant husband who stood before me.

But with a quick, furtive glance around, evidently to assure himself that on one was observing him, he snatched off his disguising, thick-lensed glasses and grinned impudently at me, his brilliant black eyes dancing with merriment—eyes which no one who had ever seen them could mistake for any others than Harry Underwood's.

"Convinced, now?" he asked. "You sure are the original Missouri baby."

I put out my hand sardonically as if he were indeed the Don Ramon Alvarez whom he was impersonating so cleverly.

"It is indeed a pleasant surprise to meet you here," I said conventionally, pitching my voice higher than usual. "My father will be so sorry to have missed you."

He took the cue instantly, bent over my hand with foreign deference.

"It is I who have all the—how do you say it in American—luck?" he answered in as distinct a tone as my own, then muttered: "What's the row?"

"There were some reporters on that Long Island train," I murmured back.

"Is that all?" in a tone of relief with him, I saw them, and they beat it to the tubes. I thought some of them would be down there to see you, and I was on the watch for them.

"You mean Rickett and the bunch with him, I saw them, and they beat it to the tubes. I thought some of them would be down there to see you, and I was on the watch for them."

"They're not movie reporters, my dear," he grinned impudently. "They're not sleuthing around, trailing your every footprint, even though they are strictly on the job, and don't you ever forget it. But having once convinced themselves that you're on your way to the Dicky-bird, they'll take the quickest route up there, without worrying themselves over what you're doing every second of the way."

He stopped, put on his thick-lensed glasses, and looked all around us.

An Insistent Question. "Safer than a church," he decided. "There are very few people on the boat today, anyway, and they're strictly stolid commuters. Before we get to the other side you can go inside, and I'll dodge around so nobody will connect you and me at all. Now, tell me, what more is there to this performance of the Dicky-bird than is in the morning papers? Have you heard from him?"

There was in his voice a note of this morning's paper. I knew that a certain divinely foolish and forgiving little girl would be hot-footing it toward her erring spouse as fast as trains could carry her. So, I accordingly looked up train routes, found out the first one in from old Sag, and stationed myself at the head of the stairs to watch for you.

"Do you know," he chuckled, "I thought I could dodge without your seeing me, but your eyes were too sharp, and when you wheeled and darted up those stairs, I—well, I haven't made a study of your agile brain as well as your other charming attributes for nothing! I was authority which I resented, yet I did not know exactly how to voice

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl of 18 and a senior in High School.

Three years ago I started going with a young man five years my senior. He is a very good, clean man. He respected me, and was very nice to me.

About one year ago I started going with another young man three years my senior. He also was very good to me.

I was to be his bride in two years. I was true to him, and gave up my first friend for him. The last two months he has changed. He says he still loves me, yet he acts as if he doesn't care whether I am with him or not. He never speaks of our future home, although that used to be all he talked about. He had a date the other night which made me feel very badly.

If you were in my place would you give up this second young man or wait and see what the future brings? Shall I go back to the first one? He still wants me to come back.

I know the first young man loves me, but I do not know what to do about the second, for I love him and him only, and don't know whether or not he loves me. VERA J.

VERA J.: Have a frank talk with the young man to whom you are engaged. This is your privilege. Ask him just how matters stand. But don't become engaged to any one simply to have attention, my dear. It is too serious a promise to make for that.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl 19 years old. While away at school two years ago I met a young man whom I learned to love very much. He had to leave before school was out, and asked me to be his wife. We set a date for the wedding. He was to come after that. That was one year and a half ago.

my feelings and took refuge in an evasion.

"How did you know I would be there?" I asked.

He whipped off the glasses again, and I fix as if the brilliant black eyes were trying every reservation of thought I had.

"All right, all right," he said. "I'll answer your question first, but that isn't going to get you anything, for I'm here to learn the whole history of the little fluttering of the Dicky-bird. However, I always believe in humoring the ladies, especially the pretty ones!"

Again he flashed the old impudent grin at me.

"So I'll tell you that the minute I saw the account of the Dicky-bird and the beautiful Miss Foster in as sure that you meant to dodge through the Pennsylvania women's room to the Eighth av. entrance and thence to the ferry by taxi-cab, as I was when from another taxi I saw you ball one and beat it down here."

"Now," he burlesqued a deep sigh, "I have answered weekly and fully your question, and I am ready to hear your answer to mine. Have you heard from the Dicky-bird?"
